Achieving the Dream (ATD) is a nationwide initiative supported by the Ford Foundation, Lumina Foundation, and the Kresge Foundation, among others, to help community colleges improve student outcomes and scale evidence-based practices across the country. ATD offers a range of programs and resources to support community colleges in their efforts to improve student success.

The ATD program has three main areas of focus:

1. Student Success: This area focuses on improving student outcomes, including graduation rates, degree attainment, and workforce readiness.
2. Institutional Improvement: This area aims to help institutions improve their processes and operations to better support student success.
3. Leadership and Capacity Building: This area provides leadership development and capacity building opportunities for community college leaders.

ATD offers a variety of resources and tools to support community colleges in their work, including case studies, best practices, and a network of peer learning communities.

For more information about ATD, visit the ATD website at www.achievingthedream.org.